The year was 1975, and Hot Tuna was playing to sold-out audiences all over.

WQIV-FM, a radio station in New York, was born because the owners of a classical station (which it previously was) couldn't make a profit! The disc jockeys, products of the late sixties, were into experimenting with the station, and the entire concept of FM broadcasting. To them, terms like "active rotation," "play list," and "top ten" just didn't exist.

This radio station was so bold as to play live concert tapes every Saturday night, featuring the Grateful Dead, NRPS, Hot Tuna and others.

As a result of this free spirit, Hot Tuna was invited to do a live broadcast. On the afternoon of July 25th, at the same time as the Apollo-Soyuz space mission was making history, so were Jorma and Jack!! (This historic flight was the only joint space venture between the USA and Soviets, and both ships rendezvoused in space where the astronauts shook hands. The Apollo splashdown occurred during the broadcast.)

So it was on this day that New Yorkers got a tasty treat that is remembered to this day—ACOUSTIC HOT TUNA!
